Many School Children Exposed One Patient in Hiding.

The most dangerous nest of small-pox with which the Health Department has had to cope in many years has been discovered in the densely crowded tenement 325 West Sixty-ninth street.

The Bureau of Contagious Diseases first learned of the pest centre last night, when Dr. John M. Kennedy, of 163 West Ninety-seventh street, reported the facts, and perf The house is a five-story "double-shape, it decker" tenement, inhabited by over one hundred people. Tenements of the same calibre adjoin it on either side. The worst feature of the case is that the malady has been running in the tenement undetected for nearly four weeks, exposing every inmate to the disease. So long has small-pox been in weeks, exposing every inmate to the disease. So long has small-pox been in the house that two patients have recovered from the infection fully ten days ago, and others have been ill for seven days.

Dr. Kennedy was called in yesterday to attend a sick child in the Hufnagle family. The patient was John F. Hufnagle, aged three years. The physician at once recognized the nature of the child's complaint. The Hufnagles told Dr. Kennedy that a number of the Lavizoli family on the top floor had been sick with the same disease.

The Bureau of Contagious Diseases was notified forthwith, and Chief Inspector Doty ordered a corps of inspectors and vaccinators to the tenement. They found Dr. Kennedy's report more than true.

Joseph Lavizoli was found ill with smai-pox, besides the Hufnagle child. Lavizoli, the inspector learned from the tenants, hand been sick, and had either been securely secreted in the house or had made his escape into a neighboring tenement on hearing that the health officials were coming. At any rate a search in beds, under beds and in every conceivable place of hiding failed to reveal the elder Lavizoli.

Mrs. Lavizoli and her two-year-old babe, Antonio, sat in the house, their faces bearing the marks of the recent ravage of small-pox. She said she had been sick, but was better. An Italian physician had been called in to attend the family, and he had kept the nature of the disease a secret from the health authorities. The Health Department will take steps to ascertain the facts and prosecute, if possible.

The two children, with Mrs. Lavisoli and her infant, were put into an simbulance and removed to Reception Hospital. This morning the former were sent to North Brother Island, but the two latter, after having their clothing disinfected and being given a bath in bl-chloride of mercury, will be allowed to return home.

Last night the tenants were vaccinated, and this morning the former were to return home.

Last night the tenants were vaccinaied, and this morning the furniture of the two stricken families was fumigated.
The walls of the tenement were also washed down.

washed down.
Inspectors are endeavoring to locate the Italian Lavizoil to-day. They believe they will find him.
James McArdie, forty years old, of 3 James street, was found in Park Row ill last night. He was taken to Oak street station. Later he was found to be ill with small-pox. The Health Department took him in charge. George Coleman, twenty-three, of I Henry street, was removed to the pest-house with the same disease.
